

SHELBURNE FARMS

A PARK FOR EVERY CLASSROOM WORKSHOP

AUGUST 2ND-4TH

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK

Your local national park has recently joined Park for Every Classroom, a program that supports collaborations between local NPS staff, teachers, and other community partners.

We focus on building vibrant education programs in park communities through teacher professional development and productive partnerships.

The goal of this exciting three day workshop is to co-create teacher professional development focused on equity-centered climate change education using park resources. Find out more about this opportunity and how you can get involved by contacting your local national park.

WORKSHOP OFFERINGS:

- Resources and contacts to support work in equity-centered climate change education
- Strategies to build student efficacy and constructive hope for climate resilience
- Sample lesson plans and real life examples of park-based climate change and equity education work
- Connect with educators from across the country
- A framework for best practices in educator professional development for sustainability
- A community of practice at the local and national levels to support this challenging but critical work
- Time to relax, re-engage, and enjoy as we learn together in a beautiful setting with 50 years of experience in park-based education and partnerships
